

No one is complaining about the spring-like weather we've been enjoying, particularly this guy enjoying a snooze in the sun outside of the Lincoln County Courthouse on Tuesday. The area won't see freezing temperatures until early next week and daytime temperatures will be in the 40s and 50s.

Stanford couple arrested for trafficking heroin

By Michael Broihier

Stanford Police officers arrested a Stanford couple last Wednesday on a host of drug and drug-related charges and a search continues for a third suspect. Arrested were Ricky Robbins, 45, and Sylvania Robbins, 42, both of 118 Harris Ave.

Stanford Police Chief Keith Middleton said that officers Rob Wilson and Zach Middleton entered the home to serve outstanding warrants on three individuals suspected to be therein, and observed a variety of suspected drugs in plain sight.

Only the Robbins were to be seen in the home and Lincoln County Sheriff's Deputy Ryan Kirkpatrick was summoned with his new K-9 partner, Inyo, to do a more thorough search that ultimately proved fruitless.

Readily visible to Wilson and Middleton were various items considered to be drug paraphernalia, such as cut straws with powdery residue inside and a digital scale, also bearing residue.

Of more interest however, was a baggie containing suspected marijuana and a plastic bag containing 20 foil packets or 'tabs' of suspected heroin.

As the officers continued their search they discovered an AR-15 rifle that appeared to be of Vietnam War-era manufacture. Chief Middleton said that the lower receiver of the AR was marked for full-automatic fire but the rifle was not mechanically capable of doing so.

Along with the rifle, officers found magazines containing 312 rounds of ammunition in total and a current-issue plate carrier bullet-proof vest.

The presence of heroin on the scene did not surprise Chief Middleton who said that heroin use has been on the upswing locally. News reports from across the nation, particularly from rural areas, indicate that heroin use has been on a steady increase starting in 2010.

Both of the Robbins' were charged with possession of drug paraphernalia, possession of marijuana, possession of a firearm by a convicted felon and trafficking in a controlled substance (heroin). The search for the third suspect continues.

Lincoln man charged with attempted murder of witness

By Todd Kleffman

A Lincoln County man is being held without bond after he allegedly fired shots at a witness involved in a drug trafficking case against him.

Jerry L. McAninch, 40, of 425 Simms Spur Road, is lodged in the Lincoln County Regional Jail on charges of attempted murder, tampering with evidence and intimidation of a witness in a legal proceeding.

According to the arrest citation, McAninch fired several shots from a 22-caliber pistol at Philip A. Taylor along Rowland Cutoff Road on Sunday evening.

McAninch was arrested early Monday morning at his residence in the New Salem community by Deputy Sheriff Sim Thacker. Officers found the pistol allegedly used in the shooting hidden in a fuel tank on McAninch's property, leading to the evidence tampering charge, the citation states.

Taylor, of Stanford, is identified in the citation as "an active participant in a criminal case against the subject."

Jailer David Gooch said McAninch was arrested Jan. 19 on a warrant for first-degree trafficking in methadone. He was released that same day after posting a $25,000 bond, Gooch said.

McAninch was among 12 people netted during an undercover drug operation in Lincoln County last year in which Kentucky State Police's Drug Enforcement Special Investigations East unit used confidential informants to make drug buys. The sealed indictments released in October showed McAninch was charged with two counts of trafficking in methadone in March and April of last year.

McAninch was arrested on one of the counts in November and was released from jail before being picked up on the second count last week. He has a jury trial scheduled in Lincoln Circuit Court for April on the trafficking charges.

McAninch is scheduled for a preliminary hearing Monday in Lincoln District Court on the attempted murder and other charges.

Fiscal Court joins other counties in passing drug ordinance

By Michael Broihier

Tuesday morning the Lincoln County Fiscal Court held a special-called meeting to hear the first reading of an ordinance designed to stop the sale of synthetic drugs in the county.

Entitled an "Ordinance prohibiting the possession or sale of AM cannabinoids, CP cannabinoids, JWH cannabinoids and HU cannabinoids," it lists over a hundred chemical variations used by manufacturers to get around laws written against individual drugs. The drug-makers have been simply tinkering with the chemistry of proscribed compounds a little bit to create chemically unique drugs that are 'new' and therefore not covered by existing regulation.

Magistrate David Faulkner said he was "tickled to death" to get the new rules on the books. "This is a bigger deal than people think. The fact of the matter is we are going to make life miserable for the people who are selling it," Faulkner told his fellow magistrates. County Attorney Daryl Day had no sympathy for those the law would affect. "You can ask me, Sheriff version of the ordinance directly from McCracken County, which was first in the state to write their own rules against the drugs, but it passed the Laurel County Fiscal Court too late. On the eve of the Laurel magistrates passing a ban, a local high school student had to be taken out by ambulance and was hospitalized for heart damage after smoking some synthetic marijuana.

Lewis passed copies of the ordinance on to Knox and Whitley counties, whose fiscal courts have already had a first reading of the law. First readings are already scheduled in Clay and Jackson counties as well, Lewis said.

Nearby counties bearing down on synthetic drug sales has not deterred users and sellers at all and that's why Lewis contacted Day. She said that she asked kids who were using the drug where they were getting them and was told, "We just drive down to this place in Crab Orchard that will sell it to anyone," which angered Day.

"We are being looked upon they way we look upon Florida with their pill mills," Day said.

Lewis said that the only resistance she is getting has come from the county attorney in Madison County. "He said that it wasn't the business of counties to write crime laws and that it should be left up to the state," Lewis said.

Day disagrees. "I know what they do in Frankfort is important but we can move a lot quicker. We can have a law on the books by March first and it might take the state a year to pass a law," he said.

Lewis agrees with Day. "This isn't to undermine state or federal lawmakers, this is a quick fix until they can pick it up at their level," she said.

After the vote, Magistrate Dexter Todd, who represents Crab Orchard, said, "We've had a lot of drug-deaths in Crab Orchard. We've got a lot of drugs. Kids are passing it around like it's candy."

"We are going to make life miserable for the people who are selling it."

Gov. chooses to shoot the messenger

By Michael Broihier

In an op-ed you will find below, Governor Steve Beshear seeks to distract taxpayers from real problems within the Cabinet for Family and Human Services that has allowed dozens of children placed in the state's foster care and adoption system to be abused, injured and sometimes killed.

Beshear breaks out a raft of logical fallacies in a not-so-subtle attempt to convince concerned grannies and dutiful school teachers and counselors that a recent decision forcing the cabinet to open its records when a child is seriously injured or killed will expose them to retaliation by "unstable and volatile" abusers.

The facts are simple. While in the care of the state, too many children are being physically, mentally and/or sexually abused, assaulted and sometimes killed and the cabinet has failed in its oversight role to prevent this from happening.

You would not even know that this was going on if it had not been for yeomen work of newspaper reporters, and Beshear's transparent attempt to shift the blame to those who've served the watchdog role that his administration has failed to fulfill is insulting to you and unbecoming of him.

Gov. Beshear has unwisely chosen to ignore what Mark Twain is widely credited with saying, "Never pick a fight with someone who buys ink by the barrel." The failures of the cabinet are inexcusable and Gov. Beshear's response to the reporting inexplicable. Before he gets sucked down the drainpipe of history he needs reform the state's childcare system and embrace Kentucky Sunshine Laws that ensure that the people, through the press, have unfettered access to paperwork that records the state's business, good or bad.

Other than that, I have no strong opinions.

Beshear blames newspapers for state's troubled foster/adoption care system

Gov. Steve Beshear

You teach in a small community and suspect a student is being abused. You want to report it, but you fear retaliation.

Can you come forward without the newspaper naming you as the accuser?

Or maybe you're a grandmother. You worry about the man your daughter is living with, in fact you're afraid of him. But you love your grandchildren, and you think they're being neglected.

Will you be able to report your suspicion without alerting your daughter's volatile and unstable boyfriend and jeopardizing your own safety?

The answer to both scenarios, unfortunately, is "no."

If a case of suspected child abuse and/or neglect later results in death or serious injury, and you reported it, your name and your concerns likely will be released to anybody who asks, whether that's a TV reporter, a blogger or even the accused. That's one of the real-life consequences of a new judicial ruling related to state records on investigations of child abuse and neglect.

The ruling, issued Jan. 19 in Franklin Circuit Court, stems from litigation involving Kentucky newspapers' attempts to access records involving cases that resulted in a child's death or serious injury.

An attorney for the newspapers has argued that no information whatsoever should be kept confidential, and that the public should have unfettered access to these records.

The judge disagreed. He said the Cabinet for Health and Family Services can black out certain information, such as names of children seriously injured in cases of abuse; Social Security numbers and other financial information; the names of other children in the family who weren't involved; and the names of private citizens who report abuse - but the names of relatives, police officers and school officials who report abuse will be made public. But we don't think the judge's ruling was protective enough, and so the Cabinet recently filed notice that it would appeal.

Newspapers will criticize the state for this decision. After all, they get to write the headlines. To date, the Cabinet has been accused of "operating under a veil of secrecy" in a supposed attempt to protect inept workers and a poorly designed system.

But this is not about shielding the system from scrutiny. We understand the need to be more transparent than in years past - in fact, I ordered such a paradigm shift in the Cabinet's treatment of child abuse records as early as last fall.

We are not arguing for the right to camouflage the actions of the Cabinet or its workers. That information is already being provided and we will continue to do so. But increased openness has to be implemented in a consistent and thoughtful way that holds the best interests of the child as its paramount priority. That is our top and only concern.

There are very real consequences - sometimes unintended - to eliminating confidentiality.

As I described earlier, lack of protection for those reporting abuse or neglect could have a silencing effect on those who would bring these conditions to authorities.

But there are other consequences. For example

-Police and prosecutors routinely share information with the Cabinet to help it determine whether children need to be removed from a home for their safety. That information might include witness interviews, forensic evidence, autopsy results and statements by a(n) accused immediately following a tragic event. The Court's ruling does not exempt that information from disclosure -even if the case is ongoing. Consequently, prosecutors will likely begin withholding that information rather than risk jeopardizing their ability to pursue criminal charges. As a result, the Cabinet will lack crucial information it needs to decide whether to intervene to protect children.

-The ruling also doesn't shield from disclosure information related to voluntary or involuntary termination of parental rights, and to a subsequent adoption. As a result, a parent who previously lost custody of a child via court order will be able to track down the child and the family who adopted that child. The result could potentially be tragic. And it certainly will stymie the Cabinet's ability to find people to adopt abused or neglected children.

-The court ruling does not exempt from disclosure the names of parents, guardians or custodial parties found by the Cabinet to have abused or neglected a child but later exonerated once a hearing on the charges was held.

Publicizing their names before their cases are fully heard is a violation of due process required by federal law, and it directly harms them and their families.

In Rhode Island, a student's lesson in religious freedom

By Charles C. Haynes

At the tender age of 16, Jessica Ahlquist has already endured more verbal abuse than most people experience in a lifetime.

A high school student in Cranston, R.I., Jessica has been taunted and threatened at school, targeted by an online hate campaign, and called "an evil little thing" by a state representative on the radio.

Her crime? She asked school officials to remove a "school prayer" banner from the auditorium of Cranston West High School. Addressed to "Our Heavenly Father," the prayer banner was presented to the school by the class of 1963 and has been affixed to the wall as a mural ever since.

At the School Committee hearing to consider the issue, public outrage turned the meeting into a religious revival. Angry citizens lined up to proclaim their allegiance to God, quote the Bible, and condemn Jessica to hell.

"If you take the banner down," one woman testified, "you are spitting in the face of God." Another banner supporter warned: "You can't vote to take this down and say that you're standing with God."

After the School Committee bowed to public pressure and voted to keep the banner, Jessica's father (supported by the American Civil Liberties Union) filed suit on her behalf.

On Jan. 11, U.S. District Judge Ronald Lagueux ruled in Jessica's favor and ordered the banner removed. It was an easy case. For more than 60 years, the U.S. Supreme Court has repeatedly held that promotion of religion by public school officials violates the establishment clause of the First Amendment.

"When focused on the Prayer Mural," wrote the judge, "the activities and agenda of the Cranston School Committee became excessively entangled with religion, exposing the Committee to a situation where a loud and passionate majority encouraged it to vote to override the constitutional rights of a minority."

Undeterred, supporters of the prayer banner are holding a "prayer rally" this week to urge the School Committee to keep fighting.

Jessica may be in the minority in Cranston, but she's in good company as the latest in a long line of Rhode Island dissenters - beginning with the state's founder, Roger Williams.

Williams, who was himself verbally attacked, was banished from Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1635 for objecting to the entanglement of religion and government that, he believed, corrupted both.

He founded Rhode Island as the first government in history with no established religion and a commitment to protect liberty of conscience for every person. As a deeply religious Christian minister, Williams vowed to put an end to centuries of oppression and coercion by erecting what he called "a wall or hedge of separation" between the "Garden of the Church and the Wilderness of the World."

Rhode Island was to be a "haven for the cause of conscience" where government stayed out of religion and all people (including Quakers, Catholics and others persecuted in surrounding colonies) would be free to choose in matters of faith.

If he were alive today, there's little doubt that Roger Williams would be solidly in Jessica's corner. He would view the "school prayer" banner as blasphemous state appropriation of religion. However big or small the issue, Williams believed that any state entanglement with religion violates conscience, divides society, and (most important for him) offends God.

Of course, keeping government neutral toward religion did not mean for Williams then, and does not mean now, keeping religion out of public life. He would applaud that Cranston students are free to pray alone or in groups (as long as they don't disrupt school). Moreover, under current law, students may bring their scriptures to school, share their faith with classmates and form religious clubs.

You might think it would be easy to stand up for religious freedom in the birthplace of religious freedom - but apparently it isn't. In Judge Lagueux's words, Jessica Ahlquist "is clearly an articulate and courageous young woman, who took a brave stand, particularly in light of the hostile response she has received from her community."

Thanks to Jessica, the spirit of Roger Williams - America's first great dissenter - is alive and well in Rhode Island.

Charles C. Haynes is director of the Religious Freedom Education Project at the Newseum.

This free six-week program, open to anyone who enrolls online, will be held from Wednesday, Feb. 1 through Wednesday, March 14, 2012. Last day to register online is Feb. 7. This is a nationally available overall Challenge, but the Fort Harrod Area Extension Service is offering our own Fort Harrod Health & Wealth Challenge for 2012. Within the area there will be prizes awarded in each county and then an overall winner in the Fort Harrod area. Plus we would like to demonstrate to the national audience that we in Central Kentucky understand the importance of being financially fit as well as physically fit for living a healthier lifestyle everyday! We want as many Lincoln Countians to join as possible! So, go ahead; take the Challenge and sign up on line.

To sign up for the Challenge, go to <http://njaes.rutgers.edu/sshw/>, click on “SSHW Online Individual Challenge.” Then click on “Register an Account”, set up a user name and password (write down what you use!) Make sure when filling in the information, you click on Lincoln County, Kentucky. At the bottom of the page, click on “Create an Account”. A new page will come up and you are registered; at the bottom of the menu – click on “My Challenges”; then enter a new challenge; when the list appears; click on the Fort Harrod Health & Wealth Challenge 2012. You will be successfully entered in our challenge. When you click on the challenge, your reporting form will appear and you can read over the list of challenges and check off the ones you do everyday. Your points will automatically be added. Challenges are generally limited to 100 points per day. When you click on “Save Changes”, you will see your points and a bar chart indicating how all the other people are doing in the challenge. Really neat! Make sure you give an email address and you will receive daily reminders and tips for the challenge.

The Challenge is part of a national Cooperative Extension program developed to motivate Americans to take action to simultaneously improve their health and personal finances called Small Steps To Health and Wealth. SSHW was built around a framework of 25 research-based behavior change strategies. The Challenge was originally developed in a “paper and pencil” format with printed worksheets and is now available online.

It has been well documented that, when people monitor their behavior and measure how they’re doing, they are often inspired to do better and achieve positive results. Participants in a SSHW Challenge are “on their honor” to report their activities accurately. If they “cheat” on reporting their points, they are only cheating themselves by not following the recommended daily practices. The 10 challenges included in Fort Harrod Challenge are not hard or complicated, but in the end can help you achieve success in living a healthier lifestyle.

The five daily health and nutrition practices are: eat at least four cups of fruits and vegetables; get at least 30 minutes of physical activity; drink water or unsweetened beverages instead of sugar-sweetened beverages; tracked 10,000 or more steps by walking with a pedometer; and learn something new about health and nutrition.

The five daily financial management practices included in our Challenge are: save a $1 bill (or more) and/or pocket change; invest $5 or more per day (including automated retirement savings plan deposits); track money spent throughout the day; eat lunch prepared at home; and learn something new about personal finance. The latter activity, for both health and personal finances, can be accomplished by visiting Web sites, attending seminars, or by reading, listening to, or viewing media reports.

If you cannot enter your data every day, don’t worry, paper tracking forms will be included in your “GYM PACK” when you sign up that you can record daily activities until they are entered online. The GYM PACK can be picked up at the Extension Office after you enter online. It includes a lunch pack, stretch band, piggy bank, counters, pedometer and various other information and items to get you started on your challenge. So good luck and go today and sign up on line for the Fort Harrod Health & Wealth Challenge 2012.

Healthier habits can prevent heart disease

By Cynthia Simpson, A.P.R.N.

Though your heart is only a little bit larger than your fist, it pumps about 2,000 gallons of blood as it contracts and expands about 100,000 times a day. As we enter American Heart Month, it’s time to focus on lifestyle habits that will keep our hearts healthy.

Heart disease is the leading cause of death among Americans. Heart disease includes angina (chest pain caused by too little blood or oxygen), arrhythmia (abnormal heart beat), congestive heart failure (inefficient heart pumping) and heart attack (blood supply is cut off from part of the heart).

Lifestyle changes and healthy habits can help you manage your risk and prevent these health conditions. This should include developing good nutritional habits and engaging in regular physical activities.

The following recommendations will also help you as you strive to become heart healthy:

- Eat five servings or more of fruits and vegetables daily.

- East six or more servings of grain products daily.

- Incorporate fat-free and low-fat milk products, fish, beans, skinless poultry and lean meats in your diet.

- Try not to consume more calories than you will use in a day.

- Spend a minimum of 30 minutes a day engaged in physical activity.

- Limit your intake of soft drinks and candy, which are high in calories and sugars but low in nutritional value.

- Limit your fat intake to no more than 30 percent of your total daily calories.

- Eat less than six grams of salt each day.

- Screen your cholesterol and blood sugar levels, and follow guidelines set by your medical provider if you experience high cholesterol, high blood pressure or diabetes.

Impact Award nominations now being accepted

It is time to nominate women in the central Bluegrass for BAW's Impact Award. The award recognizes women who have made a strong commitment to improving the lives of women and girls within the 17-county Bluegrass Area Development District.

Nominations are made by county and one winner is selected in each county from those nominees to be considered for BAW's Legacy Award. Deadline for receipt of nominations is Feb. 24, 2012.

The 17 counties are: Anderson, Boyle, Bourbon, Clark, Estill, Fayette, Franklin, Garrard, Harrison, Jessamine, Lincoln, Madison, Mercer, Nicholas, Powell, Scott and Woodford.

BAW is especially interested in recognizing women who are empowering women and girls in their communities. These woman might otherwise go unnoticed through other channels.

All women nominated will be recognized at BAW's annual Legacy Award Luncheon set for March 20 at Clarion Hotel, 1950 Newtown Pike, Lexington.

The Legacy Award winner is selected from the county winners.

The nomination form can be found on BAW's web site: www.bluegrassallianceforwomen.com.

The talents of Bluegrass women recognized at the Legacy luncheon is inspiring and shows how many women are working quietly in their counties to improve the lives of Kentucky's women and girls.

These three examples are just a sample of the work women are doing throughout the Bluegrass: Worked with middle school girls on self-esteem and physical activity, helped rape and assault victims, and set up personal finance classes for low-income clients.

Think about the women in your community, think about your friends and make the decision to nominate someone for your county's Impact Award.

Pleasant View Baptist Church news

By Scena Ann Petrey

Isn't God wonderful! He supplies our every need; most of the time He goes beyond what we even ask for, and His blessings just keep coming.

Sunday morning, Jan. 29, Cherie Martin sang a special. "I worship you, Lord. Because of who You are, I give You glory, praise and worship." This should be our attitude as we worship Him every day.

Bro. Kyle's message was taken from Proverbs and centered on "Wisdom Applied - Pride and Humility."

According to Proverbs pride is not a virtue, but rather an abomination in God's sight. Pride is trying to put ourselves in place of God - to live above God. It is thinking that we can do the same things God does.

Humility, on the other hand, has not always been received well by society. It has been viewed as a liability or weakness. "Any wise person is humble," stated

Bro. Kyle.

The message centered around a person's journey toward humility which involves six steps. We should compare oneself to God, not others. We should change our world view (glorify all for God). We should join a church; we should love those whom Jesus loved. We should look at the cross and realize what happened there. We should pray.

Heather Petrey is collecting caps/hats in an effort to help Eubank Baptist Church as they go on a mission trip to Honduras this summer. Simply bring any of these items to church and she will take them for you.

Kalyn Peek and her friend from school, Brooklyn Adams, sang "Amazing Grace" Sunday evening prior to the message.

Bro. Kyle's message was taken from Luke 18:9-14. The pride of the Pharisees was compared to the humbleness of the tax collector. One was a recognized highly religious leader, and the other was a highly despised Roman official. However, Jesus told the people in this passage that the tax collector has received righteousness.

The three truths about righteousness were the three points of Bro. Kyle's message. Righteousness does not come from ourselves; it does not come from comparison to others; righteousness does come from faith. Bro. Kyle concluded his message by saying, "Trust in Jesus and what He has done for all of us; we could not do it for ourselves."

Our church will be celebrating Baptist Men's Day, Feb. 12 with a total men's choir in both services. All men who enjoy singing are invited to help.

We welcome Chris Vanlandeghem into our church family; he made a profession of faith last week, and I incorrectly identified him.

Plans are in the process for Crossings 2012 which Stanford, let them know it is on behalf of the Stanford Church of the Nazarene. You will receive a receipt for tax purposes and the donation helps fund the home missions programs.

Service times: Sunday morning worship begins at 10:30 a.m., Sunday evening services at 6 p.m., and Christian Education Night is every Wednesday beginning at 7 p.m.

For more information about our youth group and children's programs, email the directors at www.stanfordchurchofthenazarene.com

News from Fairview Baptist Church

By Shelby Lakes

On Sunday, Bro. Johnny Baker's message focused on women's roles in churches. He referred to 1 Timothy 2: 9-15, 1 Peter: 1-5, Titus 2:3-5, and other scriptures.

Bro. Johnny said men and women are equal in church, but have different roles. He said men have leadership roles, and women serve. He also said this is not what he says, but God (Jesus chose men to be his disciples.), and said he teaches the whole council of God.

In the 1 Timothy verses, Bro. Johnny said certain women were coming into the church and that Paul was instructing the church on proper attire (for women).

Bro. Johnny said the roles of women in the church include being worshippers, prayer warriors and witnesses. He said the church, families and community need prayers.

Bro. Johnny asked for the women in the church who have important roles at Fairview to stand. Many did and it was noted that they are vital to practically all the church functions.

The service closed by many going forward to the altar to pray for ones on our prayer list. (End of sermon summary)

Celebrating birthdays were Seth Sparkman, Abby Sparkman and Bailee Baldwin. Danie and Vickie Rice celebrated their anniversary.

111 attended Sunday school. 174 were present for the worship service.

During our special worship many members participated. Those who read special selected scriptures that correlated with our songs were Tyler McGuffey, Kim May, Rebecca Garcia, Frankie Young, Violet James, Jo Ann Elliott and Chaz Garcia.

Rev. Scillely sang, "The Love of God."

Our children, Chloe, Dylan and Austin Pennington and Joel May, with the help of Rebecca Garcia, Doris Scillely and congregation, sang "Jesus, Loves Me," and "Jesus Loves the Little Children."

Doris Scillely read the verses of, "Why Should He Love Me So," while Betty Jo Singleton accompanied on the piano. Everyone joined in the singing of the chorus.

Thirteen choir members sang a grouping of songs that included, "Oh How He Loves You and Me," "We are so Blessed", and "The Wonder of It All." Those persons were Rebecca and Chaz Garcia, Ellen Hunkins, Susie Langford, Heloise Reed, Betty Jo Singleton, Janice Smith, Beverly and Iva Young, Don and Doris Scillely and Buddy and Frankie Young.

The congregation was asked to express thoughts and/or words related to L O V E. The congregation was very creative and inspiring.

Some of those words and thoughts were: L - Love lasts; O - Only worship Him, Often, One Savior, Opportunity, Others; V - Very comforting, Victory, Vision, Vows, Vivacious; E - Eternal life, Everyone, Enjoy, Emanuel, Everlasting.

The closing song was, "Love Lifted Me."

Others that helped with the service were: greeters, Pat Reed and Iva Young; ushers, Carl Elliott and Shelby Reed. Special thanks go to Kim May and Betty Jo Singleton, our musicians.

There was a good number present for worship. Our visitors for the service were Iva Young's granddaughter and great granddaughter from Richmond. Also Iva's son, Glen and his son, Jacob; were present.

Allen May from Morehead and son, Joel, were also present for the service.

Several new and continued persons were mentioned during prayer request time.

Those were as follows: our own, Jo Ann Elliott, Janet, a friend of Heloise Reed, Wayne Alford, April Coffman, Blake Wamsley and unspokens.

David Reed was reported to have had his surgery and has a lengthy arm cast.

Janice Smith expressed thanks for all the calls, cards and genuine concern she received during her recent nose surgery and illness.

After worship the choir practiced music for Easter. We will be having practices on Sundays and Wednesdays at 6 p.m. when appropriate.

Next Sunday's worship service will include communion.

Come and worship with us at 10 and 11 a.m.

I will close this article with the benediction that was used for closing our fifth Sunday service.

As we go from here - Explode in us new possibilities for service. Kindle within us the fires of Your compassion so that we may not wait too long to learn to love. May we be a people with loving purposes - Reaching out.... Breaking walls.... Building bridges.... Let us be Your alleluia in a joyless, fragmented world. In the name of our Lord, we pray.. Amen.

Superintendent's corner

Who Will Answer The Call?

By Karen Hatter

The last couple of weeks, I have thought quite a bit about Leadership—what it is and is not and the attributes and traits of those who lead successful organizations. As a school district, leadership at all levels is vital for the success of our students. The superintendent casts forth her/his vision, and district leaders, principals, faculty and staff work diligently to fulfill the charge.

As you know, this past October Lincoln County High School was identified as a Persistently Low Achieving School. Due to this PLA status, on February 12, the Kentucky Department of Education's audit team will conduct a weeklong "Leadership Assessment" both at Lincoln County High School and within the Lincoln County School District. Scrutinizing all district and high school management documents, observing classroom instruction, and interviewing students and community leaders, the purpose of the audit is to determine the capacities and capabilities of the leadership to implement the necessary improvement changes. The team's report will then illuminate the strengths and weaknesses of district leadership capacity. Therefore, for this obvious reason, leadership has been on my mind quite a bit.

A leadership assessment is based upon the premise that an organization's leadership either encourages improvement or facilitates failure. For example, we know that the captain of a ship does not operate in isolation, but relies on his chief engineer and crew to chart the course. He, however, ultimately bears the responsibility of safely delivering his passengers to their destination. I've been asked, "Aren't we all in this boat together?" And, to that question, I answer an emphatic, "Yes!" I fervently believe that every employee either takes from or adds value to, the quality of education that the Lincoln County School District provides its students. Nonetheless, it is the leaders that guide the ship. As we have witnessed with the recent cruise line tragedy off Italian shores, leadership decisions directly affect the final outcome.

The same principle applies in a local school system. While both the school and district leadership depend upon every employee, they assume the responsibility of skillfully guiding our children to the ultimate destination of college and career readiness.

However, there is another, equally important leader in every school district in Kentucky—the school board member. Representing the voice of the community, their vision and leadership set the county's educational course. It is a position of both great authority and enormous responsibility; one requiring equal doses of both wisdom and courage—wisdom to insightfully evaluate complex issues and courage to do the right thing, even though at times it may not be popular or personally advantageous to do so. Currently, due to the resignation of Eddie Whittemore, the Lincoln County Board of Education has a vacancy. It is a vacancy requiring a conscientious and dedicated public servant. Who will answer the call?

It is the school board members who craft the organizational policies and procedures that guide superintendents, principals, and teachers every single day. Educators do not function in a vacuum. We depend upon community support and involvement to assist us each step of the way. It's imperative that parents and community leaders serve on our governing bodies. Within the school, that body is the Site-Based Decision Making Council and in the district, it is the Local Board of Education.

In the upcoming weeks, The Interior Journal will run an advertisement announcing the vacant school board seat due to the resignation of Mr. Whittemore. I ask that a public servant step forward and selflessly serve the families and students in this unrepresented district.

Review the qualifications listed in the newspaper notice and pick up an application at the Lincoln County Board of Education. Consider joining the governing body that comprises our district's leadership. If we are going to support and guide those manning the helm of each school, we need strong leadership from the governing crew. I encourage any qualifying citizen to consider this an opportunity to make a difference for the children of Lincoln County. We need one good man or woman to join the other four members and "come on board" to help guide the ship.

Think about it...the condition of our school district is a reflection of our community. As citizens, we cannot afford to turn a blind eye nor a deaf ear. These are difficult times, analogous to a captain's treacherous waters, but as superintendent of Lincoln County Schools, I am confident that the state's assessment will support our leadership capacity. I believe that and I fervently desire that for our high school. In a rural community like ours, our public schools must provide a quality education. Hand in hand, we must strive diligently to make the decisions that will accomplish this goal. We owe it to all of the children and to their future. What does that take? It takes leaders who are willing to persevere until it happens. I pledge this commitment to you. Now, we need someone to pledge their commitment to our community and serve on our local school board. Yes, Leadership has certainly been on my mind and I ask yet again, "Who will answer the call?"

HERE'S YOUR SIGN! An out-of-town big-rig driver apparently missed this sign at the US 150 entrance to Lamb Road in Crab Orchard and tried to take a load of feed down it Tuesday. He jackknifed the rig and closed both Lamb and Deep Well Road for several hours.

Outreach group seeks donations to fund shelter for displaced area families

By Katelynn 'Danger' Griffin

A shelter to house displaced Lincoln, Boyle, Mercer and Garrard county families will be opening March 6 in Lancaster, but in order to meet the deadline the shelter desperately needs volunteers.

Brandy and Jason Marshall are supervising the renovation four apartments in downtown Lancaster, two of which will provide a place for families displaced by fire, flood or other disaster to stay until they can find a permanent solution. The other two apartments will be rented out and that money will go to paying the shelter's utilities, mortgage, and insurance tax. The shelter will be managed by the outreach program Second Chances.

Located next to the apartments, Harvest Market will provide clothes and other items to families in need. Harvest Market's name derives from the idea that the general store will provide an opportunity for the community to give back to those in need, through donations, allowing others the chance to reuse the items.

"This has been an adventure," Brandy Marshall said of the renovations. The Marshall's have funded the project out of their own pocket to the tune of around $100,000. With five children of their own, they are counting on volunteer hours and money to complete the project. "We need more help because there are no shelters in Lincoln or Garrard," Marshall said. She came up with the idea of opening a shelter after her Garrard business caught fire four years ago; March 6 is the anniversary of that fire.

Steve Cooper and Jake Ison have also donated their time to the cause. Ison, who is a member of the Animal Planet show Call of the Wildman, said, "This is a good thing for the community and they should help. You never know when you will be in need."

Ison has helped with the construction and has a list of supplies that the shelter needs. Drywall, trim, doors and cabinets are at the top of the list, but they will accept any items, ranging from nails and screws to paint.

"Left over building supplies goes a long way," Marshall said.

Marshall is asking community members to make a pledge of $25 each in the hopes of reaching a total of $5,000. The group thinks that this is a reasonable amount to ask for and that economically it will go a long way estimating that they can buy four pieces of drywall for that amount. People can donate at the Whitaker Bank in Lancaster or drop off money or check donations at the shelter on 112 Lexington Street in Lancaster.

Ison estimates, providing they have all the materials, five people could finish one apartment if five days. If they have ten people, they could get two apartments completed in the same amount of time. Feb. 17-19 the shelter will hold a Building Marathon, in hopes of finishing up the shelter.

The shelter is enjoying broad support, and numerous people and businesses have donated to the cause including Tudor Printing, Neil James (also a member of the Call of the Wildman show) and Gregory Scott Cash. Lancaster Mayor Brenda Powers and Whitaker Bank have also supported the shelter. Volunteers can contact Brandy Marshall at 859-792-1807 or by email at secondchancesoutreach@gmail.com.

KHSAA Board adopts new soccer alignment

The Lincoln County High School boys and girls soccer teams are moving into a new district.

The Kentucky High School Athletic Association's Board of Control approved the re-alignment of soccer to resemble those of the other sanctioned team sports in its Jan. 25 meeting in Lexington.

Beginning with the 2012 season, Lincoln, as well as other area schools, will be grouped into districts in the 12th Region that match the districts in which those schools play baseball, basketball and softball.

"This is an important step in the progression of soccer and one that will allow the sport to grow into a strong geographical alignment like the rest of the team sports," said KHSAA Assistant Commissioner Michael Barren. "We hope the closer proximity of districts and regions will allow schools that may have been hesitant to add the sport to go ahead and do it now."

The adopted alignment has 16 regions with district alignments based on feedback from the membership and discussion from the Board of Control.

Lincoln, which had played in District 30 of the 15th Region with McCreary Central, Pulaski County, Somerset, Southwestern, and Wayne County, moves into District 45 of the 12th Region.

Lincoln girls escape with 57-53 win

Lady Patriots blow 20-point lead before edging Somerset

By Nancy Leedy

Holding a 20-point lead with 3:25 to play in the third quarter, it looked like the Lincoln County girls were headed to another lopsided win. But, just as fast as you could say "Somerset Briar Jumpers," the momentum quickly changed.

Somerset used a 30-10 run to erase its deficit and force a 53-53 tie with just 1:51 to go in the game. But then, as Somerset looked to take the lead, the Lady Patriots regained control, forcing three Briar Jumper turnovers and sinking four straight free throws in the final 1:32 as Lincoln held on to win 57-53.

While happy to add another "W" to Lincoln's record, Lady Patriot coach Cassandra McWhorter was not happy with the overall effort.

"I'm proud of the girls for doing what it takes to come out of here with a win, but we just can't have those letdowns," she said. "We've had some letdowns throughout the season but to let a team get back in it when you're up, at one point, 20, and there late 16, 17. We just quit doing what got us up. We quit pushing the ball, we settled for walking up the floor and halfcourt set. I think we got a little tired."

Lincoln (16-7) led 43-23 when Somerset began its rally effort. Cassie Bray, who led Somerset with 15 points, ignited the Briar Jumper run with 2:34 left in the third, stepping behind the arc for the first of her four 3-pointers in the scoring surge. Alyssa Anciro, who had 11 points, tallied eight of her points off layups in the run and Bethany Edwards knocked down six points, including a driving layup which evened the score at 53-all.

"We had some defensive letdowns where our press hurt us at times. Maybe I should have pulled us out of it and given us some rest because they started to break our press and get some layups. Then we weren't

Lady Pats cruise over Rebels

By Nancy Leedy

The Lincoln County girls maintained their firm hold on No. 1 in the 45th District standings by collecting a second lopsided win over rival Boyle County.

The Lady Patriots, who defeated Boyle by 51 points on Jan. 13, completed their sweep of the Lady Rebels in the first game of Friday night's double-header here as they cruised to another 51-point victory, 84-33.

Lincoln (15-6, 4-0 district) took control in the first quarter, jumping out to a 21-10 lead. By halftime the Lady Patriots had increased the margin to 28 points, 47-19, and they never looked back.

"I told the girls going in that I was worried about us and execution and about doing the right things. And I felt we did the right things tonight," Lincoln coach Cassandra McWhorter said. "I was pleased with how we came out, how we played throughout the game and how we finished. We've been talking about having full games and I was glad that everybody was able to come in and contribute."

Twelve Lady Patriots saw action in Friday's win and all 12 scored, with freshman forward Tiandra Hocker coming off the bench to score a game-high 16 points. She was one of four Lincoln players in double figures. Starters Sydney Harris and Kourtney Belcher finished with 15 points and 10 points, respectively, and freshman reserve guard Heidi Huffman

Lincoln surges early to put away Casey Rebels 73-51

By Nancy Leedy

Lincoln used a strong start and balanced scoring to beat visiting Casey County 73-51 Tuesday night.

It took the Patriots just a few minutes to take control of the game. Trailing 6-4 midway of the first quarter, Lincoln broke on a 20-2 run to build a 24-8 lead then took a 39-19 advantage into the half. And Casey never challenged.

"We had a real, real good day of practice yesterday, and I thought the kids came out tonight and played pretty well," Lincoln coach Jeff Jackson said. "Our kids came out pretty focused. I thought we defended pretty well and we executed pretty well on the offensive end. We got some good shots, knocked down some 3's, got some inside baskets and that just got us going a little bit."

Luke Hill led four Patriots in double figures in the win with a game-high 17 points. Trenton Edgington followed with 12 points and Carl-Lewis Cummins and Timmy Taylor each had 11 points.

Lincoln (14-10) shot 52 percent from the floor, making 29 of 56 shot attempts.

'Our kids came out pretty focused. I thought we defended pretty well and we executed pretty well on the offensive end.'

Lincoln coach Jeff Jackson

Casey (3-21) went 3-for-6 to open the game and take a 6-4 lead. However, the Rebels left the door open for Lincoln by missing their next six shot attempts and turning the ball over seven times.

And Lincoln took advantage, using the 20-2 scoring surge to start to pull away.

"My team has played hard all year and this is one of the few times we've just not had any energy," first-year Casey coach Darryl Burkett said. "I am the proudest coach in Kentucky with the losingest record. I have some good kids who have fought hard all year, and we're to the point in the season where nothings gone well for them and we've kind of hit a wall. And tonight we just didn't have any energy, any get-up-and-go to us. We didn't compete very hard and then, on top of that, we didn't make good decisions."

Before Casey's offensive

slump set in, Clay Cannon and Skyler Wright had hit to give the Rebels a 6-4 edge. Cannon scored Casey's first two goals and Wright added a bucket midway of the period.

Micah Ward and Hill scored Lincoln's first two buckets of the game but it was Edgington setting off the offensive blitz, going in for a putback with 3:31 on the clock. Hill followed with a bucket in the paint and the next six points were all scored off turnovers. Taylor, Hill and Jacob Conway scored off the miscues to put Lincoln up for good, 14-6.

Boyle defense holds off Lincoln

By Hal Morris

Lincoln County coach Jeff Jackson has been impressed with Boyle County's defense all year, and now his squad knows why.

The Rebels used a stifling defense which limited the Patriots' offense to 30 percent shooting in the second half of a 54-36 loss Friday.

"I think they're the best defensive team in our region, I've said that all along. I think their record's very deceiving. They had some issues early, but one thing they've done is they're stuck together," said Jackson, whose team suffered its first loss in the 45th District. "And they came in here tonight and gave us an old-fashioned butt whoopin'."

The Rebels actually started to take control at the end of the first half, closing on a 7-2 run, capped by Satterly's 3-pointer

“They have a lot of good players, they’re well-coached, and they have a lot of weapons. That’s a good combination,” Boyle coach Greg Edwards said of Lincoln. “They are probably about 12 deep and they have some people on the bench as good as those who start.”

McWhorter agrees with Edwards when it comes to Lincoln’s depth.

“I’ve said all year that I’ve got a whole bench and a whole team that is very capable. You look down through there (scorebook) you’ve got one, two, three, four people in double figures and a couple others close. We’ve got a lot of people capable of coming in and doing big things and putting the ball in the hole.”

“The one person that doesn’t score tonight is Rachel (Spangler) and she’s on the bench with an ankle injury.”

Boyle (11-10, 0-5) did hold its own early in the game, taking the first lead off Hannah Harris’ game-opening 3-pointer and rebounding from a 7-0 Lincoln run to challenge 11-8 midway of the first quarter.

Belcher collected a field goal and two free throws in the Lady Patriot run and Sydney Harris sank three free throw

But the closeness of the game faded as the first quarter progressed as Lincoln began to pull away. Belcher, Ciara Saylor and Emily Fox scored a bucket apiece in the final three minutes and Spencer Sims added two free throws in a 10-2 run to push the Lady Pat lead to 21-10.

And the lead only grew. Lincoln, which connected on 56 percent of its field goal attempts (34-for-61), outscored Boyle 37-14 in the second half, holding the Lady Rebels to nine points and five points in the final two periods. Boyle made good on just 20 percent of its shots for the night (10-for-51).

Boyle was 6 of 10 shooting in the quarter and shot 56 percent in the second half. For the game, Boyle was 18 of 36 from the field and went 13 of 17 at the free throw line.

Kyle Rice scored five points and Micah Satterly had a three-point play as Boyle took its first lead of the game at 29-27 with 5:06 left in the quarter.

A Micah Ward bucket tied the game at 29-all, but the Rebels closed out the third quarter on a 7-0 run. Rice put back his own miss, Zach Hester drilled a 3-pointer from the right wing and Rice had a layup after a Hester steal to take a 36-29 lead going to the fourth quarter.

“We talked at the half about being aggressive, attacking the basket, getting them in foul trouble. And if you’re not shooting the ball well, get to the free throw line, get a layup, get your rhythm,” Boyle coach Steve Adams said. “And we did a much better job moving the ball, we were much crisper, cuts were harder. We’re just starting to have confidence and play well.”

Lincoln closed to within three at 42-39 on a deep 3-pointer

In Loving Memory of Bo Upton 10-11-83 ----- 2-1-02

It has now been 10 years since my only child, Bo was murdered. This article listed below was in The Louisville Wayside Christian Mission’s newsletter for Christmas in 2011.

Son's Tragic Death Inspires Loving Christmas Tradition. Nearly ten years ago, eighteen year old high school senior and college baseball prospect Bo Upton was brutally murdered by five strangers. The only child of his mother Sherry, seven years passed before justice was pronounced on those who had taken the young man's life. In the meantime, the boy's grieving mother tried making sense of this senseless tragedy while tirelessly pursuing those responsible for his death. Refusing to allow the case to grow cold, she posted billboards in the area while offering a sizeable reward to anyone who could help bring the killers to justice. Today, the five murderers are serving lengthy prison terms, but this, of course, offers only limited consolation. Each Christmas, Sherry must face the holiday season without her only child. In memory of her son Bo, Sherry Moore devotes herself to bringing joy to others each Christmas. As is her yearly custom, Sherry, her husband of four years, and a host of family and friends visit Wayside Christian Mission with coats, toys, and gifts for the homeless. "Christmas is about Jesus," she said, and showing Christ-like compassion to those in need is how Sherry honors her Savior and her only son. This year, Sherry and her group of volunteers brought over 300 winter coats to Wayside Christian Mission. And to the delight of the children in our care, Sherry makes certain that every boy and girl received a toy. To the delight of the adults, treat bags with delicious Christmas goodies were distributed in the lobby of the Mission's Hotel Louisville. While Bo's death is a tragedy that most parents will, thankfully, never know, God and Sherry have used his death as a memorial for bringing joy to others each Christmas season. Again this year, hundreds of needy people will be warmed by winter coats lovingly donated by a grieving mother-- all given in the memory of a young Christian boy whose life offered so much promise.

This is one way I do things in memory of Bo to keep his legacy of love, laughter, generosity & kindness alive as I pass it on to others thru the spirit of Christmas, which was Bo's favorite holiday. We thank everyone who has prayed for us because of losing Bo. Please keep Ryan's family in your prayers too. Everyday I do things to survive, as Bo being killed has left an empty hole in my heart that can never be filled. Words can't express how much I love & miss Bo; Who was, Is & Always will be my loving son.

Love,
Sherry Moore

The only interruption in Lincoln's first-half run was a Zack Scott trip to the foul line for Casey. Scott was fouled by Ward while shooting a 3-point shot but only sank two foul shots to make it 14-8 after one.

The Lincoln run resumed in the second quarter with Hill going inside for two points, Ward putting up a jumper and Taylor and Hill each converting on three-point plays to extend the Patriot lead to 24-8.

Micah Smith finally ended Casey's scoring drought with 5:56 left in the first half. Taylor Leigh, who led Casey with 13 points, hit for his first points of the game around the five minute mark and Baylen Hill drained a 3-pointer to keep Casey within 12 points.

However, Lincoln distanced itself from Casey in the final minutes of the half, using two 3-pointers by Cummins and one by Brandon Pittman to help open up a 39-19 halftime matched up out of it so they knocked down some open shots," said McWhorter.

Fortunately, Lincoln was able to stop the Somerset comeback.

Sydney Harris broke the tie with 1:32 showing with two free throws off a Madison Brooks foul. With just under a minute to play, Chansler Gilbert stole the ball away from Edwards near the midcourt line. After several passes, Anciro was whistled for a foul on Fox. The junior guard, who had a game-high 25 points, hit both ends of the 1-and-1 to give Lincoln a 57-53 edge with 13.5 ticks remaining in the game.

Somerset (10-11) was denied any scoring chances in the waning seconds, with Rachel Spangler forcing a turnover and Lincoln running out the clock.

"I'm proud of the girls for the defensive stops down the stretch. Coming up with those loose balls was huge," said McWhorter. "You just don't like to see that lead dwindle like it did. I don't ever worry about them backing down. They're going to scrap and fight and are not going to quit on me. We just have to step up and have leadership to where, when we have a lead, we don't let teams come back."

McWhorter had no worries early in the game as Lincoln jumped out to a 17-point lead. Somerset's Marika Krause opened the game scoring with a triple only to have Lincoln answer with 20 straight points.

Fox tallied first for Lincoln with back-to-back buckets and added a third goal mid-run. Kourtney Belcher, who finished with 13 points, scored eight points in the opening run, Harris had four points and Spangler had two to put Lincoln up 20-3 after one.

"I thought it was a good bounce back after Saturday's game (49-45 loss to Montgomery County in Berea College Prep Classic)," said McWhorter. "I thought a lot of people stepped up in different areas, especially early. We were moving the ball so well and passing the ball to one another. I liked how we were playing as a team."

Lincoln connected on 10 of 15 shot attempts in the first quarter lead.

Lincoln finished the night with 10 triples, going 10-for-30 from behind the arc. Cummins and Edgington had three 3's each, Taylor had two and Pittman and Dalton Godbey each had one.

Half of the Lincoln 3's rained down in the third quarter as the Patriots posted their biggest lead, 59-29.

Casey was 5-for-12 from 3-point range. Hill, who scored 11 points, drained two of the 3's in the fourth and Leigh got one as the Rebels won the final frame, 22-14.

"We've played hard this year and we've played an incredibly hard schedule," Burkett said. "We've played 22 games now and 18 of the teams we've played have winning records. But these are good kids and they have hung together as a family. We're just going to keep working hard and getting better."

Jackson applauded Burkett for the team he's built since taking over.

FARM FACTS

By Dan Grigson
Lincoln County Extension Office

Keys to forage/livestock profitability

Forage crops play a significant role in Kentucky, but farmers have yet to fully realize the potential. More than half the cost of producing beef is associated with growing feed for animals. Beef cattle receive nearly 80 percent of their nutrition from forage.

So, the quality of forage a farmer produces has a big impact on the potential for making a profit. Our forage quality in Kentucky falls short of where it is capable of being in many situations. Farmers should develop an appreciation of the importance of having good forage crops. Top producers have a great appreciation of forages because they know that better forages make better livestock profits.

Producers also should know what forage options are available and what would work with their soil and climatic conditions. It is important to soil test and fertilize the soil as needed, and to know what species will work best for their operation. Variety selection is also a factor. Producers should select ones at the top of the variety trial lists not just the cheapest seed you can find. Cheap seed usually means lower production. They don't sell products cheap that produce high yields and quality. These seeds are in high demand and that's why they are higher priced. Low yielders generally are in low demand around the country, so they send them to Kentucky because many farmers here want to buy cheap rather than good producing seed.

Producers should use legumes everywhere they can in pasture and hay fields. If legumes can be established into grass pastures, they can improve yields and improve quality. The legumes (clover, alfalfa, lespedeza) produce their own nitrogen and with today's high nitrogen fertilizer prices, that is a big plus for legumes. Alfalfa-grass is the best hay every livestock producer should grow. You will save a bunch as you don't have to buy any or very little grain, blocks or special supplements. It is easy to grow and the cheapest source of protein and energy for your livestock.

Optimizing forage utilization needs to be a major emphasis in Kentucky by livestock farmers. We generally don't do a very good job of grazing pastures to get the most out of them to increase profitability. I know of no area in Kentucky in beef cattle production that we have a greater opportunity to improve profitability than improving our overall grazing systems. Rotational grazing could help us increase our cattle numbers by 25 percent and improve the overall pasture and hay quality. This is so simple and easy to do. Farmers should also minimize the amount of stored feed. Improved grazing programs that would extend the grazing time can help reduce the amount of hay needed. It is also important to reduce hay losses while in storage. Farmers spend a lot of time and money preparing hay, yet it is estimated hay and feeding losses cost U.S. producers $3 billion. Why go to all that work and spend all that money to let it rot away? Hay losses can be reduced by reducing or eliminating hay/soil contact and being placed in areas that dry quickly after a rain. Extra care for high quality hay such as covering with a tarp, storing inside for plastic wrapping may all be used to protect the hay. You can reduce feeding losses significantly by using hay rings and feeding racks.

As farmers plan and manage their forage program, the most important thing is for them to never stop trying to improve. So as you start your mind to working on this year's farming program, I want to encourage you to make a good effort to improve your forages and the result will be an improvement in your livestock profits.

For more information contact Dan Grigson, U.K. Extension Agent for Agriculture, 104 Metker Trail, Stanford, 365-2447.

“I Love Cows” Essay Contest

All active 4-H and FFA members are encouraged to participate in the annual Dustin Worthington “I Love Cows” Essay Contest. The contest awards Kentucky youth involved in their local 4-H and FFA programs with a one-year-old heifer. Participants must complete an application and essay, as well as acquire three letters of recommendation, one of which must come from their local 4-H agent or FFA advisor. Applications can be picked up at the Lincoln County Extension Office anytime and must be turned in before Feb. 27.

The contest honors the late Dustin Worthington of Mercer County, who was involved in the beef industry before his death on April 4, 2000. Worthington was killed along with his friend Dale Goodpaster in an automobile accident. His parents developed the program to carry out their son's passion for cattle and agriculture in general. In Victoria and J.D. Noe, in the middle, are pictured with Dennis and Deana Worthington, parents of Dustin Worthington, in which the memorial is in honor of.

2000, two registered beef heifers were donated and given away and the program has grown ever since. To date 150 animals have been awarded to youth across the state. Last year, 14 heifers were awarded to 16 youth. The 2011 “I Love Cows” Essay Winners from Lincoln County were co-winners Victoria Noe and J.D. Noe. Their heifer was donated by Hal Akers.

This program encourages, but does not require, youth to participate in a “chain program.” Youth who receive a cow from the contest are encouraged to continue the chain and donate the first born heifer back to the program. To date, 46 past winners have donated animals back to the program.

Farms or individuals interested in donating a heifer of any beef breed can contact Dennis Worthington at (859) 734-7533.

For more information, or to obtain an application, please contact the Lincoln County Extension Office at 365-2447 or visit www.dustinworthington-memorial.org.

Card of thanks

Too often in our society today, all we ever hear or read about is the bad news. Last Saturday night something wonderful happened to our family.

The Broughtontown Community Center hosted a fund-raiser for our family. Due to bad health and desperate treatments, our finances have suffered. The community center sponsored a chili supper and gospel singing with all the proceeds going to our family. The Happy Travelers not only sang for 2+ hours, but they also stayed to the end of the evening to allow us to use their sound equipment. Through the generosity of our many friends and businesses throughout the area, donated items from meals to UK basketball tickets were auctioned off with the money going to our family. Billy Shackelford was the auctioneer, and he stood for 3+ hours in order to auction all the items off.

We just want to take this opportunity to thank everyone. The contributors of these items are too numerous to mention; we would be very upset if we forgot anyone. Thank you for your time, gifts, donations and prayers. Thank you for your love and support. Words can never begin to tell you what is in our hearts.
